Micromobility is booming – busy times ahead for Estonian Bikeep

Bike use surged in 2020 as the pandemic made people more conscious of their well-being. The world is changing, more and more cities will soon look like the bicycle city of Amsterdam. According to BBC, more than €1bn has been invested in cycling-related infrastructure and 2,300km of new bike lanes have been rolled out in Europe alone since 2017.

Due to the pandemic, people have started to use bikes again and 2020 is expected to be the peak year for micromobility, with a business opportunity for the market.

Bikeep network

Bikeep builds up a network to serve the needs of local micro-mobility users

Stations are funded by:

- Real Estate developers and municipality OR subsidized by advertisement revenue
- Reasons for implementations:
 - Attracting more micro-mobility users
 - Connecting to the Bikeep micro-mobility user network
 - Establish your brand as innovative and pro sustainability
 - Create memorable arriving experience
- Access and user control via Bikeep mobile APP across all services and linked to a larger municipal transit scheme via transit card integrations

Once a critical tipping point is exceeded Bikeep infrastructure becomes a necessity

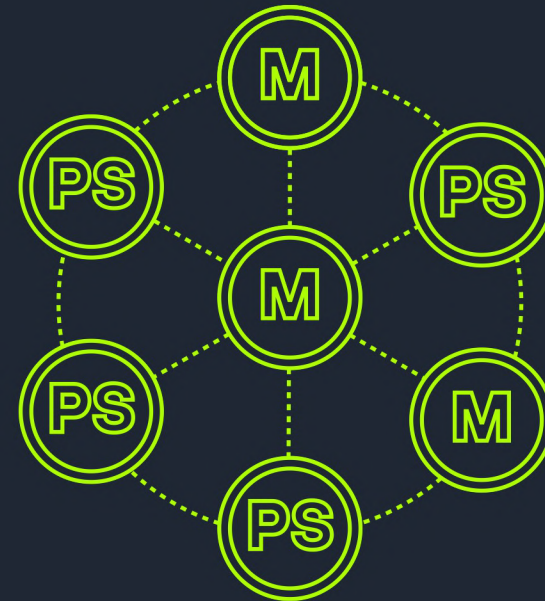

Importance of municipal participation

Municipal is the most important part of network as it owns most of the public space

If municipal has given their approval the private sector will follow

Outcome of this will be network
